Summary

Armenia regularly reports hate crime data to ODIHR. Armenia implemented ODIHR's programmes on Prosecutors and Hate Crime Training (PAHCT) and Training Against Hate Crime for Law Enforcement (TAHCLE) in 2021 and 2022, respectively.

In 2023, amendments to hate crime provisions in the Criminal Code of Armenia were developed within the framework of a parliamentary initiative in coordination with civil society. The amendments came into force in 2024.

ODIHR's Key Observation

ODIHR recognizes Armenia's efforts to enact hate crime legislation that is more comprehensive and to build the capacities of police, investigators, and prosecutors in responding to hate crimes. However, based on the available information, it observes that the law enforcement agencies of Armenia do not record the biased motivations of hate crimes. In addition, ODIHR observes that Armenia would benefit from strengthening collaboration with and facilitating the work of civil society on hate crimes, including on victim support.

National Developments

On 1 July 2022, a new Criminal Code – including amendments to the hate crime provisions – entered into force following its adoption by the Parliament of the Republic of Armenia on 5 May 2021. The new Criminal Code includes an extended list of protected characteristics under both the general penalty enhancement provision (Aggravating circumstances for liability and punishment under Article 71) and the specific penalty enhancement provisions for a number of substantive offences, including murder, severe harm, moderate harm, minor harm, kidnapping, illegal deprivation of liberty, mental abuse, physical abuse, and damage to property. The following protected characteristics are now covered by the amended hate crime provisions: racial, national, ethnic or social origin, religion, political or other views, or other personal and social circumstances.
